Introduction to the Liturgy of the Word
Twenty-Eighth Sunday In Ordinary Time

YOU WILL HAVE TREASURE IN HEAVEN

The readings from this Sunday could not be any more straightforward or easy to understand, though living its message may not be as easy as it is clear. Perhaps the simplest way to put it is to say we are being presented with a choice. The choice between wisdom and foolishness.

For people of faith, and for those who are not afraid to confront the realities around them, can be seen the wisdom that comes from seeking the things of God, the things of heaven, the things that are eternal. We can also see the foolishness of seeking only, or primarily, after the passing things of this world. The former gives life. As we read in today's second reading from Hebrews, "the word of God is living and effective." Conversely, as the Gospel from St. Mark tells us the young man, still attached to his worldly possessions and desires, "went away sad."

The unfortunate reality for those who spend their time and efforts constantly accumulating, is that they are never satisfied. Sooner or later boredom oftentimes sets in, setting a cycle into motion of hoping that somehow a bigger house, better car, larger bank account, and so on, will give some satisfaction and meaning. I remember reading a book about ten years ago wherein the priest has a conversation with one of the teenagers in the parish. The youth came from a well-off family and not surprisingly had an attitude of entitlement, although the priest was quick to note that the teen was respectful and had some involvement in the parish. The priest asked him what his plans were after high school and he responded that his next step was college. He was then asked what he wanted to do after college and he said get a job in the career of his choice. Then the priest asked what would follow and the teen admitted that he wanted to make a lot of money but also get married and have a family. Afterwards? Retire and enjoy his later years. Then came the big question from the priest, "and then?" and the boy's face dropped. He knew the answer and it was not pleasant for him. None of the things he wanted were bad in themselves, particularly having a career and a wife and children which are obvious goods. The problem was that he had no inkling of anything beyond this life, no preparation for the day when he would be called from this life to give an account of himself before God; no preparation for the inevitable heartaches, sorrows, and losses that come with this life, no consciousness that everything he was seeking for, even the good things, would one day be taken from him.

The Sacred Scriptures this Sunday are meant to be a wake-up call to all of us. Jesus tells us that He came into the world, "that we might have life and have it to the full." He wants us to enjoy the good things this world has to offer, but He also invites us to a spirit of detachment, recognizing that all good gifts come from God. The happiest people are those who can enjoy what this life has to offer but are also able to let go of it when those times inevitably come. This is the freedom that God has made us for; ultimately, He has made us for Himself. St. Augustine, after spending his youth and young adult years in a life of dissipation, finally came to God acknowledging with profound wisdom, "We are made for you O God, and our hearts are restless until they rest in you." No house, no car, no business, no career, no bank account can settle the restless heart. Only God can. We have a choice: we can ignore this teaching and 'go away sad', which is sooner or later inevitable, or we can have the wisdom of Augustine and find our life and our peace in God.

Perform a Random Act of Kindness

Spend Time with an Older Person

Have a grandparent, aunt, uncle or neighbor who sometimes needs a bit of assistance accomplishing some tasks? Of course, visiting them can and should happen any time of the year. But it might be good to take International Day of Older Persons as an extra reminder of how important it is. Check in on them, see if they could use any help, or just sit with them awhile to keep them company. Many people forget how much of a wealth of knowledge older people can be when they are allowed to tell their stories, share experiences and simply be heard. It's like taking a page out of living history! So listen, learn and celebrate the day with them.

Stewardship Thought

"It is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for one who is rich to enter the kingdom of God." (MARK 10:25)

Jesus uses tough language that we may not want to hear. However, we are all called to be generous with all of our gifts. Not just the ones we pick and choose, but all our gifts, and especially the one that means the most to us! That includes our time in prayer to God, our talent in participating in parish ministries and our treasure supporting our local parish and other charities.
