Introduction to the Liturgy of the Word
Third Sunday of Lent

I AM WHO AM

A recent survey of Americans' beliefs and attitudes regarding faith in God showed some disturbing trends among those who say they believe in God. One of them was a finding that nearly half of all believers agreed that God took little to no interest in their lives. This was equally true among Christian believers. It shows a complete lack of awareness that God took such an interest in us that He sent His Son into the world to save us from sin and death. It raises a serious question as to how much and to what extent do these self-identifying Christians take their faith seriously or even understand it. The second revelation showed that less than 1 out of 5 believers accept that God puts boundaries on their lives. In other words, they believe in God but think that they can do as they please. This explains why so many believers, including Christians, accept much that is contrary to Sacred Scripture, the teachings of the Church, and the natural law. What the survey did find was that most believers accept a therapeutic religion that makes them feel good but not one that calls them to fidelity and truth. Contrary to this, God, in His self-revelation shows forth that He is the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end; the one who holds all creation in Himself; or to use the words of this Sunday's first reading from Exodus, "I AM WHO AM." It is certainly true that our Lord has revealed to us the fatherhood of God who is "kind and merciful." At the same time there are numerous places in Sacred Scripture where we are told to "fear" the Lord. Fear in this context does not mean anxiety or worry but rather 'awe'. We are to hold God in awe. The implication of this is clear. God is One and to "God alone belongs glory and power." If we accept this then we must be willing to acknowledge that God has a will that binds us and, yes, places boundaries on how we live. We are to hold God and His will in awe because in it we find not only truth, but life and peace. How we arrived at this place when people can say they believe in God but that God places no boundaries on us is a new place in human and Christian history. In can be traced to recent decades where many people insist that they can believe in God without the Church. The problem with this position is that for the vast majority of people who have accepted this, including Catholic Christians, the only God they find is their alter-ego. Rather than looking into the face of Christ, the Church, or the Sacred Scriptures to find God, they look into the mirror. How can God place boundaries on us if the god we see in the mirror says everything we do is perfectly fine? The Gospel reading today from St. Luke offers a clear reason why it is so essential to seek, know, and do the will of God. "If you do not repent", our Lord tells us, "You will all perish." Never being outdone in generosity our Lord remains patient. We read in the same Gospel how the landowner who is ready to cut down the bad tree decides, at the gardener's request, to wait and give the tree the chance to be cultivated and bear good fruit. The gardener easily represents our Lord who cultivates us with truth, love, and mercy. However, as the Gospel tells us, if there is no change in the tree 'then it can be cut down.' One final and practical thing to be aware of when we insist that God puts no boundaries on us is that if everyone had this mindset there would be personal and social chaos. In fact, many do live lives of personal chaos because of unrepentant sin and a lack of conversion of life. On an extreme level, men like Hitler, Stalin, and Mussolini did not believe God, or any god, could put boundaries on them and so they felt no constraints against doing atrocities against their people and millions of others. Most of our social problems, though less extreme than that just mentioned, comes from a belief that no God, or God, can put boundaries on us. It places us in a dark place for God's mercy, while all-encompassing and generous, does not prevent the damage we can do to ourselves and others when we forget that God is "I AM WHO AM."

Stewardship Thought

"I am the Lord who brought you from Ur of the Chaldeans to give you this land as a possession."
~ Genesis 15:7

Just as the Lord gave Abraham, Moses, and the Israelites a land to possess, He has also given each of us a home. Whether your home is grand or humble, it is a gift from God. Abraham prepared a great sacrifice to the Lord in gratitude for the home God gave him. How do you show your gratitude to God for the home He has given you? Do you make a sacrifice of any kind? Do you return any of your finances to God, investing in your eternal home just as you invest in your earthly home?
