Stewardship Thought

"Thus, the last will be first, and the first will be last".

- MATTHEW 20:16

You've heard the saying "it's not where you start, but how you finish." This certainly applies to this Bible passage. We have a responsibility not only for our own lives, but for the lives of others as well. We are called to generously share our gifts with others, not hoard them for our own use. Our sincere gratitude and cheerful generosity will help us live "God-centered" lives and not "self-centered" lives.

SEEK THE LORD WHILE HE MAY BE FOUND

When we hear these words from today's first reading from the Book of the Prophet Isaiah, we may find ourselves wondering why the Lord would seemingly go into hiding. After all, the Lord makes it abundantly clear that He reveals Himself to us and wants us to enter into a relationship with Him. Yet we need to understand the deeper meaning of this teaching. It is not so much that the Lord cannot be found but rather that we can stop seeking Him. If we do not seek Him, He cannot be found. It is true as I mentioned in a previous reflection that God does seek us out like "the hound of heaven" but He can only be noticed by those who truly seek Him with a sincere heart. The difficulty is that once we stop seeking the Lord, whether consciously by embracing sin and evil, or inadvertently through indifference and the busyness of life, we may not find the Lord; not because He is hiding but because we are not allowing ourselves the fidelity and stillness that is needed for the Lord to reveal Himself to us. Countless are the people who had started out with a living faith only to get caught up in the sins and distractions of the world only to see their faith and their knowledge of God erode, usually imperceptibly until it can be completely erased. In the Gospel reading from St. Matthew our Lord reveals His desire that all be saved, that all come to His vineyard. Whether they come to Him in the earliest days of their lives or much later on in the twilight of life, the only thing that matters to the Lord is that we come. The men in the parable who grumble against the landowner (who represents God) do not understand how much the landowner desires everyone to come into His vineyard to engage in a reciprocal relationship: the laborers assist in building up the vineyard while the landowner lavishes them with their just payment. Similarly, our Lord calls us into that same kind of reciprocal relationship. We work to build up God's Kingdom on earth while God lavishes us with the gifts of the Holy Spirit and the promise of eternal life. Just as the landowner is not outdone in generosity, neither is God. The laborers who grumble should have been rejoicing to see other laborers find their way to the vineyard, finally meet the landowner, and share in the bounty of the landowner's generosity. They missed the mark on this one because they lost sight of generosity. The landowner comes with a generous heart responding with love, while the laborers come seeking what is theirs', acting on self-interest. There is a lesson here that we must be cognizant of: do we seek the Lord so that we can enter His vineyard using the gifts and talents God has given us to build up His Kingdom on earth, or do we simply go through our religious exercises mostly out of obligation? The landowner is calling all of his laborers to purify their motives in working in his vineyard, to open their hearts to others who have yet to know the goodness of the landowner, and to rejoice when they finally do enter the vineyard. God calls us to the same: to serve Him in gladness and out of love, to open our hearts to those who do not know God or who have forgotten Him, and to rejoice when they finally seek and find Him.
